I am a German student in year 5. talk to me about my weekend. Use the simple past

Sure! Let's talk about your weekend in simple past tense.

So, let's begin. How was your weekend? Did you do anything exciting or fun?

cu

I was at a zoo.

That sounds wonderful! Which animals did you see at the zoo?

cu

I saw a tiger and a Nashorn

That's great! Tigers and rhinoceroses are fascinating animals. Did you learn anything interesting about them while you were at the zoo?

cu

Yes I learned that they are from Africa.

That's correct! Tigers are not native to Africa, but rather to parts of Asia, such as India, Russia, and Southeast Asia. On the other hand, rhinoceroses are found in Africa, as well as in

I need 3 arguments against Fridays for future.

Certainly! Here are three arguments against Fridays in the future:

1. Shift towards Flexible Workweeks: With advancements in technology and changing work cultures, the future might witness a shift towards more flexible workweeks. This could involve adopting alternative scheduling models, such as compressed workweeks or customized days off, which might make the concept of a fixed "Friday" less significant.
2. Continuous Learning and Personal Development: As the pace of innovation and knowledge acquisition accelerates, individuals and organizations may prioritize continuous learning and personal development. This could result in the integration of learning and training activities throughout the workweek, making Fridays just another day for professional growth rather than a dedicated day off.
3. Increased Focus on Work-Life Integration: Future work environments might emphasize work-life integration, blurring the boundaries between work and personal life. This could mean a departure from rigid weekday structures, including Fridays, and the adoption of a more fluid approach where individuals have autonomy to balance their work and personal commitments throughout the week.

It's important to note that these arguments reflect potential future trends and possibilities. The actual outcome will depend on various factors, including societal, cultural, and organizational dynamics, and individuals' preferences and needs in balancing work and personal life.

Korrekturlesen und Feedback correct the following text: Dear Mr. Perry!

fistly I would like to introduce myself. My name ist Sally, I am sixteen years old and a good friend of your son Neil Perry.

I am writing to you, because of your connection with Neil.

I get the feeling, that you are too rough and too strictly to him. This shows that everytime when you talk to him, his face is turning white and he get nervous and stammered.

Futhermore you have too high expectations which puts him under pressure.

Neil was very sad that he cannot be the assistant editor anymore. He has no choise, because he always do what you want.

In contrast, other fathers are proud of their son's and show that with a smile or a hug, but you are too cold to Neil.

Dear Mr. Perry,

Firstly, I would like to introduce myself. My name is Sally, and I am sixteen years old. I am a good friend of your son, Neil Perry. I am writing to you because of your connection with Neil.

I have the feeling that you are too rough and strict with him. Every time you talk to him, his face turns white, and he becomes nervous and stammers. Furthermore, you have high expectations that put him under pressure. Neil was very sad that he cannot be the assistant editor anymore. He has no choice because he always does what you want.

In contrast, other fathers are proud of their sons and show it with a smile or a hug, but you seem to be too cold towards Neil.

Yours sincerely,

Sally
